

ROMEO CUENCO-crew 120, safety 055, room B-1091, Hotel repairman-plumber-Emergency assignment, Assistant Team Leader Fire Station No. 6.

He was sleeping. He is used to the sound of banging because his cabin is underneath the bakery. He smelled gas and/or steam. When he opened the door the sprinkler was on. He then closed the door and stayed in his room, he estimated about 10 minutes.

He opened the door, left his room, went down a passageway. He noticed "plenty of" sailors going ashore at the midship's gangway. He heard the code Alpha, then he heard a Code Bravo and he went to his fire station. He heard the muster for the emergency teams. He went to the control room and saw Magnus. His team was assigned to check B deck cabins, up to the sun deck, Zone 2, top to bottom.

He then returned to the mustering area, outside the engine office, and awaited further instructions. He remained there until the crew was ordered to go to the Saga Theater.

He did not panic. He did not exit the ship because of his duties as a fire team member and assistant team leader. He had been a team leader previously.
